

September 29, 2010

Written by NickyBear's Momma
Wednesday, 29 September 2010 13:27 -

Baby Nicholas got his fiducials today, which I mentioned a few days ago and explained that they were placing 3 different screws in his head for mapping for radiation. The procedure was done at Le Bonhuer Children's Hospital here in Memphis. Dr. Klimo part of Dr. Boop's team placed them. The procedure itself took less than 15 minutes. He woke up in a silly great mood and without the bandaids on his head you would have no idea he had a procedure done. God continues to amaze us with how strong he has made this little boy! He came back and ate well and is now resting. One more day left here in Memphis! Tomorrow Nicholas will have his Hickman Line removed and we will have a port placed under his skin so we will be done with cords and line changes (whewwww this is a lot of work for Nick and I to do) He will also have another ABR hearing test to make sure everything is still stable.

Dear Baby Nicholas,

We love you so much our little man and we continue this process daily with God's perfect hands on you. Stay strong my boy

